There has been considerable discussion among politicians as to evacuate the president might not favor tax on domestic wines or beer or a stamp tax on bank checks, legal documents and patent medicine, but such information as is obtainable makes it more than probable that he has not considered any of these questions in that connection. That he will recommend legislation retiring the green-backs by the issue of low rate bonds seems to be almost certain, and it is not unlikely that he will ask Congress, as an alternative, to authorize the secretary of the treasury to issue low rate bonds in his descretion, within certain limits to protect the gold re-

American Losses.

If the president should recognize the ment of great American losses with Spain as a reason for insisting that the press matters to a conclusion in some way. Another matter that unsome way. Another matter that undoubtedly will figure integely in the message to Congress will be the Venenuclan boundary dispute. The president will endeavor to show that he has done all that it is possible to accomplish to carry out the direction of the last Congress and effect a cettlement of this difficulty by arbitration.
He will refer to the foreign correspondence of the past year, including Secretary Olney's last and most pressing note to Ambassador Bayand and the reply of the British government, which reply of the British government, which there is reason to believe will amount substantially to a repetition of its willingness to a 'mited but not a full arbitration. It is believed the mesarbitration. It is believed the mes-sage will show that the president has made clear to Great Britain the deep comern the United States feels in the affair and its desire for a peaceful settlement of this important subject. In this shape the Venezuelan dispute will be laid before Congress for an expression of its will in the further guidance of the executive.

The Bering sea claims will also be touched upon, and it is believed the president will take the ground that the United States being in hour president will take the ground that the United States being in house bound, as the result of the Paris arbitration, and the modus vivendl adopted during its pendency, to pay these claims, Congress should act favorably upon a communication which he will submit, providing for the appointment of a mixed commission to ascertain and exitle them.
